VOLUME XXXI.

MT. STERLING, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, MAY 4, 1922.

NUMBER 58.

Contract Let For Winchester Pike

The State Highway Commission at Frankfort yesterday let the contract for building the Winchester pike from the city limits of this city to the Clark county line. The distance is four and one-half miles and the lowest bidder was the O. P. Raymond Construction Company, of Cynthiana, to whom the contract was let, they bidding $141,300 for re-enforced concrete. It is expected work will begin within the next thirty days and be completed before cold weather. The bids ranged from $141,300 to $217,000, the lowest bid received on rock asphalt being $153,580.

Those who had the matter in charge are highly elated over the material selected and feel that a road of re-enforced concrete will make the best and most durable hard-surface road known in the building of modern highways.

In this connection we would like to express the appreciation of Montgomery county to State Highway Engineer Joe S. Boggs, and also to Hon. H. Green Garrett, member of the State Highway Commission, for the treatment they have accorded this county in securing the necessary state funds for the project, and also for getting the matter in shape whereby we are assured of a road before fall. These two gentlemen have been exceedingly faithful to the interests of this county and they, together with Mr. Roy G. Kern, who has looked after the interest of this county, are to be congratulated upon the part they have taken, and we feel Montgomery county owes them much. May we have more of their type in public office.

Maysville Plays Here Sunday

Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Fair Grounds a Park Mt. Sterling will play its second game of the season in the Blue Grass League when it faces the strong Maysville aggregation, which to date has three victories to its credit and no defeats. For this engagement the local team will present the strongest line-up of the season and feels confident of taking the Mason county aggregation into camp. Charles Warren, the premier pitcher, of Louisville, will be on the mound for the locals, while Lackey, said to be the best catcher in the league, will be at the receiving end. The infield has also been considerably strengthened by the addition of "Shot" Johnson, shortstop, Albert Woods, second baseman, and "Peanut" Sassin, utility man. These players all hail from Portsmouth and are said to be ball players of considerable merit. They have already reported and will be given their initial try out at Paris today.

Today's Games

This afternoon the local outfit is scheduled to meet the strong Paris nine on the Bourbon county lot and quite a number of local enthusiasts will attend the exhibition. Since playing Paris last Thursday the Bourbon county contingent has taken the scalp of the strong Winchester team, but the local boys are going out for blood, and hope to get revenge for the stinging defeat they received at Paris last week. The battery for today's game will be Townsend and Lackey, with Fugate held in the reserve.

Other games scheduled for today are Maysville vs. Lexington and Cynthiana vs. Winchester.

The standing of the various clubs in the league follows:

Club	Won	Lost	Pct.
Maysville	3	0	1.000
Lexington	3	0	1.000
Cynthiana	1	2	.333
Paris	2	1	.667
Mt. Sterling	0	3	.000
Winchester	0	3	.000

EARN BURNS NEAR BETHEL

The tobacco and stock barn of T. S. Robertson, of near Bethel, 55 by 105 feet, together with four work mules, gears, harness and agricultural implements were a total loss by fire on Wednesday morning between 5 and 6 o'clock. Origin of the fire is unknown. The loss was about $5,000, with insurance with the C. W. Kirkpatrick agency for $2,500.

Pool Will Distribute $9,000,000 May 20

Growers of tobacco in Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio, who are members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, will receive May 20 another payment of approximately $9,000,000 on their crops which they delivered to receiving plants of the association, the second payment to be of the same amount as the first, according to the decision of the board of directors of the association, in session at the offices at Lexington.

The manner of delivery of the checks to the growers is left to the director in each district, to whom all the checks for growers in his district will be sent.

It is expected to make Saturday, May 20, a day of jollification in the district, with speeches at public meetings in most cases, followed by the delivery of the checks to the growers.

These details, however, are left to the discretion of the director in each district and no uniform method of delivery has as yet been agreed upon. Each district will announce to the county papers the time and the method of distribution to be followed in his district.

After thorough discussion of the outlook, with a review of sales already made and some others in immediate prospect, the directors were told that they could assure their constituents that those who had joined the association would receive more net money per pound for their tobacco than those who refused to join, beside paying expenses and the payments on the warehouses which are to be deeded to the association by June 15.

It is expected that the drive for new members will be started on the day of the second distribution and kept up for the following week with the idea of signing up the organized part of the burley district 100 per cent strong. Clifton Rodes reported favorable results in West Virginia, and Tennessee also is to be visited.

Site Selected For New Hotel

The directors of the new hotel have decided upon a location for the new structure and closed a deal with the owners, C. G. Thompson and Mrs. George E. Coleman, for their lot on the corner of Maysville and High street. The lot faces Maysville street 192 feet and High street 85 feet. It has on it a two-story brick residence on the corner and the live stable running back to the line of Mrs. Patsy McNamara. The price paid for the property was $17,000, $16,500 to be paid in cash and $500 to be taken in stock.

The directors have an offer of $3,500 for a portion of the lot which will not be used by the hotel company, but do not think it wise to sell at this time as they feel it will command more money.

In considering the various sites offered to the company the directors have had the expert counsel of various architects and it was the unanimous opinion of both the directors and the architects that a corner lot was essential, and it was the belief of all architects and directors that the lot selected was the very best available. The directors were of the opinion that it would be best for the company if a lot on West Main street could be secured, but nothing was offered that was considered desirable, they were unanimous in their decision on the lot above named.

The directors considered the matter carefully and after looking at it from every angle felt that the site purchased will be the most desirable and acceptable to the various stockholders.

Tentative plans will be submitted by various architects at once, and it is hoped one will be accepted and completed in detail so that bids can be advertised for and let within the next sixty days.

CIRCUS DAY, MONDAY, MAY 29

The circus is coming, holding many interests for every member of the family. For example, little Willie's behavior has been beyond reproach. He has seen the flaring posters announcing the coming of the circus and nightly chores are done with a precision which has caused mother to take particular notice. Willie has felt the thrill.

The circus is an American institution—it is a recreation for all classes. Seated side by side the youngsters of the rich are just as delighted and can gain no more enjoyment than the poorest orphan, and the daring feats of the bareback riders, thrilling aerial acts and wholesome comedy of the clowns fall alike upon eyes and ears.

The special train bearing the Campbell-Bailey-Hutchinson Combined Circus and Wild West will arrive in Mt. Sterling at daybreak Sunday, May 28, spending the day in our city. The glittering mile-long free street parade will take place at noonday and there will be two complete performances at 2 and 8 p. m. Doors will open one hour earlier.

FARM AND HOME NEWS FROM OVER KENTUCKY

Interest in sweet clover as a soil building and pasture crop is on the increase in Livingston county, according to County Agent L. C. Pace.
More than 200 acres have been sown of this crop this spring.

In line with the community plan of farm and home improvement, Mc-Lean county farmers are planning four community fairs to be held in different sections of the county this fall. County Agents R. H. Ford reports. Committees already are busy working out arrangements for them.

In order to allow Crittenden county farmers the possibilities in growing alfalfa and the best method of producing the crop, W. D. Sullivan, Marion, will co-operate with the College of Agriculture extension division and County Agent J. R. Spencer in applying lime to 20 acres and seeding the field with the crop.

The number of boys and girls enrolled for the poultry project in Junior agricultural clubs of Fayette county for the coming year has been increased 50 per cent over that of last year, County Agent W. R. Gar-bert says. One hundred fifty youngsters will hatch from two to four settings of purchased hatching eggs furnished by interested poultry raisers of the county who are co-operating in furthering purchased poultry work.

If present plans materialize, Dar-less county this fall will have a strictly agricultural fair that will not be run for profits, according to a report of County Agent J. W. Whitehouse.
Plans are to hold the fair in one of the tobacco warehouses in the county, it is said.

"Maud kicked the bucket," said
Gus, as he sadly surveyed the split milk.

"Was the dance a success?" "Yes, scarcely speaking."

COLLECT INFORMATION— OR DO YOU PEDdle IT?

Observe! Remember! Compare!
That is Alexander Graham Bell's
"Rule of Three" for self-education.
Why not carve the words on the portals of our schools? Teach them to your children. They are worth more than the four or five thousand dollars it costs to send many boys and girls through college. Learn—and follow —that Rule of Three yourself.

Listen again to Dr. Bell:
"The very first essential of any real education is to observe. Without that, you have no material out of which to manufacture knowledge.
Remember what you have observed.
If you do not remember, then you have lost the material that you gained in observation. Compare the facts you have observed; and you will find yourself thinking out conclusions. These conclusions are real knowledge, and they are your own."

This is what made John Burroughs a great naturalist, Morgan a great financier, Napoleon a great general.
It is the foundation of education.
The observing part of the process is the hardest. That is what you must do to get material for knowledge. To collect it you must read, study, look about you, ask questions.
Some people do it—most don't. Most people stop collecting information and start to peddle it. It takes humility to ask questions. It is more satisfying to the vanity to hand out information. Yet the most remarkable men in the world are eternal collectors of facts. Roosevelt was.
Lincoln was. So is Edison. A man who recently went to interview Lloyd George reported that the premier nearly wore him out with his eagerness to find out certain things.

Lord Northcliffe, the famous English publisher, is another of the world's greatest listeners. Probably no man on earth has had more interesting experiences than he. No man could have a better excuse for doing all the talking. But he doesn't. He gets you to tell him what you know.

The "next time you are seated in a group of people, listening to the sound of your own voice, just say to yourself:

"This is nice music I hear. Ain't I the grand little philanthropist! Always giving—never receiving—when it comes to information. I am as rich in knowledge as Rockefeller is in money. I don't need any more. I have enough. My head is full of facts. Step up, brother, and take one.
No, don't bother to repay me by telling me anything in exchange. Nothing you know could possibly be of use to me."

BOYS SUGGESTED AS OATS AND CORN ACREAGE DROPS

A considerable decrease in the oats acreage of Kentucky and probable decrease in the corn acreage will follow the late wet spring experienced in the state this year, it is said at the College of Agriculture.
Much land left vacant by these conditions, especially that of a worn, thin nature, can be used to good advantage for growing soybeans for hay, according to Ralph Kenney, a crops extension specialist. This crop not only improves the land, but also makes a good nitrogenous feed, he said. Soybeans, however, leave the soil in a loose condition and unless some fall-sown crop, such as wheat, barley or rye, is used after them, the land is apt to wash badly, it was pointed out.

IMPORTANCE OF RELIGIOUS TRAINING—SUNDAY SCHOOL

No little child should be without religious training, for it is as essential to the balance and beautiful growth of his character as the proper food is to his body. This training can be given in the home and in the Sunday School. Both are excellent means, and should supplement each other, for it is when these two institutions work together that the child receives the highest benefit.

Because of the ease with which the child learns, and the capacity to retain even unto old age what was learned in childhood, religious training should begin early. Do not say, "Oh, when my boy is old enough to decide for himself I will let him choose his church." You do not leave his manners until then, so why his morals? High ideals and a good moral code are most easily formed in plastic years.

The child is naturally an imitator and hero worshiper. The stirring stories of Bible heroes and the application of the truths of the great old Bible stories go far toward helping him formulate the rules which are to govern his own actions now and in later life.

The parents in the home are the ones whose high privilege it is to begin their children's religious training. It is a pity that so many through thoughtlessness or neglect or a false sense of fitness neglect this sweet duty. The Sunday School next should take up and help to broaden and develop the child's religious experience.

There are several ways in which the Sunday School does its work a little better than the same work can be done at home. In the first place, children are drawn to other children. They naturally tend to work or play in groups; to be with other children imitating or joining in their activities gives incentive to Sunday School work.

The Sunday School carries on a regular and systematic course of Bible study, adapted to the ages of children, and presenting the most suitable Bible material in an attractive form.

A visit to the live modern Sunday School in the average church would be a means of enlightenment and surprise to many. Hand work, simple songs, and rhythm for little children, and home work, class competition, and even dramatics and pageantry for the older ones, have been the means of making Bible study delightful, attractive, and absolutely indispensable to our children.

There are ways in which we parents can and ought to co-operate with the Sunday School. Our children can learn to be punctual and regular. We should show our interest in their progress and experience. How proud they would be if father or mother would also go to Sunday School, perhaps to the adult Bible class. "A little child shall lead them." Then let us have faith in the old Bible promise:

"Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old he will not depart from it."—Mary Collins Terry.

Lower Tobacco Insurance Likely

Acting on a suggestion by Claude F. Snyder, vice president and manager of the Henry Clay Fire, that an investigation be made of the total premiums that tobacco barns in the burley district in Kentucky is capable of producing with a view to determining whether a change in rate on this class is justified, Manager G. H. Parker, of the Kentucky Actuarial Bureau, has submitted the proposal to the Western Actuarial Committee for consideration.

Manager Snyder of the Henry Clay expressed the opinion that the total premiums on tobacco in barns in the burley district are not more than 25 per cent of the approximate insurable value of an average yearly crop and not more than 33 1-2 per cent of the whole.

"This condition," he says in his letter to Manager Parker, "is due doubtless to two main causes. One is transient and bids fair to be short-lived—that is, the financial depression among farmers during the past eighteen months. The other has reference to the rate which we have been told by agents and farmers will not be paid by a large number of tobacco growers who figure that by watching their barns carefully they can afford to take the chance for the three or four months that the crop is in the barn. Included among this number, of course, is the safe moral hazard class and hence in many instances the companies are deprived of the most desirable class of patrons while naturally the undesirables are always 100 per cent present."

Fugazzi School Blazing a New Trail
in the Business College Field
and Hewing Its Own Way

Prominent educators of Kentucky inspected Fugazzi School the past week and appeared greatly surprised to know that such a wonderful business college has been built up in Lexington by Southern Brothers. Dr. W. J. Hutchins, president of Berea College, after looking over the entire school and finding out exactly what it was doing, said: "It's simply marvelous," and Lexington should stand solidly behind a school that is rendering the service that this school is rendering to the people of Kentucky.

Dr. Jonathan C. Day, who is lecturing for the Berea Foundation Fund, expressed his opinion along the same line of Dr. Hutchins. Other visitors were Mr. H. E. Taylor, Business Manager, and Mrs. F. O. Clark, Dean of Vocational Training of Berea College, who stated that Dr. Hutchins, the president of Berea, was so impressed with Southern Brothers' School at Lexington that he used Southern Brothers' as an example in an address to the student body of Berea College expressing to them the marvelous success of this school and how it has been accomplished by Southern Brothers.

Mr. William Yent, passenger agent of the C. & O. railroad, and Mr. W. B. Pearce, passenger agent of the Illinois Central, were also visitors at this school the past week.

Miss Anna Chandler Goff, of the College of Music, paid the Fugazzi school a visit, stating that she had heard so many nice compliments about this institution that she wanted to see it, and after looking over the school she said it was everything that she had heard it to be and she wished it unlimited success.

Dr. E. J. Bulgin, accompanied by his choir, Messrs. Percy James, Rufus Perkins and Harry Box, visited the Fugazzi School the past week, where Mr. James and Mr. Box sang some selections, after which Dr. Bulgin addressed the student body, and the chapel hall was so full that dozens of students had to stand along the walls in order to hear the speaker. Dr. Bulgin paid this school a real compliment when he stated that it had been his pleasure to address practically all business colleges in the United States and that this school had the most intelligent looking body of students and faculty that it had been his pleasure to address in a long time. He was very much impressed with the school spirit that existed in this institution. Dr. Bulgin added that what he liked about the students was that their presence at the school was proof that they meant business.

The public should bear in mind that Southern Brothers' School is blazing a new trail in the business college field, turning neither to the right nor left, but hewing its own way. The success of the school which has been so marvelous will demonstrate this fact. Southern Brothers are leaders, not imitators and followers. They do not wait for some other school to start something and then pattern after them. The advertising of this institution is original. The form of instructions and the handling of students is also original, which has been one of the causes of Fugazzi graduates being so great in demand.

Mr. Alvis Tinscher, a young mountain boy with one hand, finished this work the past week, and went direct to Cincinnati to a good position with the Globe-Wernicke Company.

Mr. Goebel Lockman, who also graduated the past week, accepted a nice position with the Kentucky Hardwood Flooring Company at Winchester, Ky.

Mr. Creed Smith left the past week when he accepted a position with the Golden Ash Coal Company at Harlan, Ky.

Mr. Emmett L. Bell accepted a position with the Southern Railway Company the past week at a salary of $133 per month.

Mr. Viola Tinscher has been doing work at the Herald the past week. Miss Maude Burton accepted a position the past week with the Postal Telegraph Company.

The president of a progressive private Normal stated to Mr. Southern, who has just returned from a successful trip to Eastern Kentucky that up to a few years ago he had been recommended an Accredited school in another part of the state, but since an Accredited school has been

Equality With Great Britain

Out of the cloud of argument made in the house of representatives on the naval appropriations bill has come the impression that 86,000 enlisted men are adequate to maintain fully the five-five-three naval ratio established at the Washington conference.

Effective naval power consists of adequate material manned by a competent personnel at the right place at the right time. Some people think that if we have sufficient warships with merely "peace time" crews on some and the rest tied up, we can get adequate crews any time they are needed. It takes ten years to train a naval officer and three years are required to make a competent sailorman out of the best material on earth—an American. This can't be done in the face of a specific diplomatic crisis because there is not time to attempt it would more than likely precipitate the war one is trying to avoid.

Those who advocate weakening the navy at the present time in the name of economy and peace lose sight of the fact that economy is the judicious spending of money, not the refusal to spend it, and that to invite attack does not make for peace.

A nation impotent to support its legitimate rights has the choice of being elbowed out without coming to blows or being thrown out after a fight.

For the first time in our history the United States has a definite and reasonable naval policy. It is that the United States should maintain a navy equal in all essential respects to Great Britain's and two-thirds stronger than that of Japan. This is the policy enunciated by our delegates to the Washington conference. It is accepted by Great Britain, Japan and the other great powers. It is what the American people want and have a right to expect.

In this connection, Secretary Hughes said in a recent letter to congress:

"The only question would seem to be whether our navy should be reduced below the treaty standard by a provision of personnel inadequate to established in Lexington by Southern Brothers, he felt that the Lexington Accredited school should have all the business in Eastern Kentucky and he was using his influence for Southern Brothers' Fugazzi School of Business in Lexington.

maintain it.

"To this question I think there can be only one answer. I strongly believe that it would be most injurious to the interests of the United States not to maintain fully the standard of the treaty.

"The American delegates (to the Washington conference) deemed it to be essential that they should stand inflexibly for the ratio shown by existing strength and thus they insisted upon a replacement schedule which would give equality with Great Britain and a ratio of 5-3 with Japan. This result was achieved. We should have taken a wholly indefensible position had we asked for less. But of what avail are this labor and success if the navy is not kept up to an agreed standard?"

"I trust that an adequate personnel will be supplied to maintain the eighteen battleships which the United States is entitled to keep together with the auxiliaries that would be appropriate to such a fleet."

When the American people make known in unmistakable language that they will accept no less, there will be no further quibbling about how many men are required properly to man our navy. We shall simply take the Japanese total and multiply it by five-thirds. We shall simply take the British total and match it.

Seventy-one Japanese, including two members of parliament, have been sentenced as grafters. This is evidence that the Japs have attained a high level of civilization. Where they are still backward is seen in the fact that fifty-two of the grafters were sent to prison.

Speaking of omnipotence—there ain't no such thing in either courts or convention wherein Cupid, the rogue, is concerned.

THE NEW HOTEL LOCATION IS SETTLED

When we were agitating the question of a new hotel we said it mattered not where it goes, a new hotel of modern build and equipment is necessary for the growth of Mt. Sterling. The stockholders appointed a committee on location, they have had advice from leading hotel architects, they have been careful, thoughtful and continuously on the job to which they were assigned, they have done their best, they have located the building. Their decision may not meet the approval of all the stockholders; it could not, for many men have many minds. The location was not of our choosing, but it is our location now, and we are for it as heartily as if it had been placed on our favorite site. The location will be recognized by our people as the Thompson lot, corner of Maysville and High streets. Our dream now is a hotel so towering that it can be seen by the traveling public, and to have every modern convenience known to hotel architects and builders.

We are next interested in the name. What shall it be?

$8,000,000 INVESTED IN FOX FARMING IN UNITED STATES

More fur farmers are engaged in raising foxes than any other fur-bearing animal, according to reports to the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture. Observations made in the field by representatives of the survey indicate that at least 500 ranches are raising silver foxes, and that there are between 12,000 and 15,000 foxes in captivity. It is estimated that about $8,000,000 is invested in this industry.

The industry of breeding fur bearing animals has grown because of the rapid development of the modern fur trade in the last 25 years. The United States is the largest fur market and fur consuming country in the world.

Many inquiries concerning fox farming are sent to the biological survey. The problems met by fox and other fur farmers require, as in the case of other livestock, a knowledge of species, temperament, sanitation, diseases and parasites. In addition, fur farmers are handling wild animals in captivity and not domestic stock. A knowledge of pelts, particularly of values and market requirements, is essential to success from the business standpoint, and this ordinarily means to visit personally warehouses, manufacturing furriers or the sales of furs. As breeders cannot always do this, representatives of the biological survey are constantly bringing before them all possible information relating to the fur industry in all its phases.

BIRD LOVERS ASKED TO AID IN BIRD COUNT THIS YEAR

The bird-counting work of the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture, which was seriously decreased during the period of the war, is now being taken up more energetically, with the aid of many voluntary observers. Any interested persons who are familiar with the birds of their respective localities can contribute data in connection with the survey, which will extend over a number of years. The information which this study will furnish concerns not only the total bird population of the United States, but also its fluctuations from year to year, and the effect of the present state and federal laws on the increase of game and insectivorous birds.

Instructions for properly making a bird count will be sent, with report blanks, to anyone upon application to the bureau of biological survey. Officials hope that counts will be continued on all lands where they have been previously made. It is especially desired to obtain series of the counts indicating bird life on the plains, the deserts and in the southern and western states.

The height of the breeding season should be chosen for this work. In the latitude of Washington, D. C., this comes about May 30. Near Boston it is about a week later, and south of Washington it is earlier. In any locality the count should be made as soon as the birds are well settled on their nesting grounds, but not until after the end of the migration season. What is wanted is to learn how many pairs of birds actually nest within the selected areas. Birds that visit the area only for feeding purposes must not be counted. The best time to make the count is early in the morning when male birds are usually in full song, and each may safely be taken to represent a breeding pair. A 40 to 80-acre tract should be selected, representing average farm conditions without an undue amount of woodland or orchard. Information is desired in detail as to the character of the land surveyed. The bureau hopes that many persons interested in bird life will make one or more counts this season.

LAUNDRY FAMILY WASHING

The citizens of Mt. Sterling and surrounding territory are beginning to find out just what good laundry and prompt service stands for with the man or woman who dresses neatly. It matters not how good the quality in dress unless it is kept clean and in shape there is nothing tidy about it and the man or woman who does it cannot dress up in such clothing. It is just so, so. The Mt. Sterling Laundry cleans and shapes. The prices are just right and the wearer is always dressed up when he gets his laundry from the Mt. Sterling Laundry. Family washing is a particular job and unless the laundry is provided with special machinery first-class work is only a promise, for it cannot be done without it. The Mt. Sterling Laundry has the machinery and turns out work that is satisfactory, satisfactory because the process puts the washing in a condition as nearly perfect as possible.

325 Veterans Are Wards Of State

There are 325 world war veterans in the various state institutions under control of the State Board of Charities and Corrections, Joseph P. Byers, commissioner of public institutions, announced in making public a report made to the United States Veterans' Bureau at Washington.

Seventy-eight of the men are in the state hospitals for the insane and 247 in the state reformatory at Frankfort and the prison at Eddyville.

C. R. Forbes, director of the Veterans' Bureau, wrote to Governor Morrow recently asking information about the veterans in the state institutions. The governor turned the letter over to Mr. Byers, who in turn asked for reports from the various superintendents.

There were, during the latter part of April seventy-seven former service men at the Central State hospital at Lakeland, seventy-one of whom already were under the care of the Veterans' Bureau. There was one veteran in the Eastern State hospital, but he will be transferred to Lakeland when his claim for government aid is passed upon. The Western State hospital contained none.

The reformatory at Frankfort had among its inmates at the same time 195 service men and Eddyville had 52.

Nurses Needed By Government

The United States Civil Service Commission states that there is need for nurses in the hospitals of the United States Veterans' Bureau and the Public Health Service and at Indian schools and agencies. Applicants will be received for these positions until further notice.

Applicants are not given a written examination, but are rated upon the subjects of physical ability, weighted at ten per cent, and training and experience, weighted at ninety per cent. Applicants must have graduated from a recognized school for trained nurses requiring a residence of at least two years in a hospital giving thorough practical and theoretical training.

Full information concerning entrance requirements, salaries, etc., and applications blanks may be obtained by communicating with the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., or the secretary of the civil service board at the postoffice or custom house in any city.

LATE ALFALFA CUTTING FOUND TO BE BETTER

Delaying the cutting of alfalfa until it is nearly in full bloom has been found a better practice than mowing it soon after blooming starts. Trials made by the United States Department of Agriculture and state experiment stations indicate that the yields are larger over a period of years, and that the life of the stand is prolonged by delaying harvesting until the plants are nearly in full bloom.

Hay made when the plants are nearly in full bloom possibly is not quite so palatable, but this is offset by the gain in the quantity of hay. The fields that were cut prior to or at the beginning of blooming showed a tendency to die out sooner. Cutting a crop late in the fall so that not enough growth was left for protection in the winter also had much to do with thinning stands. The department recommends that alfalfa be given time to reach a height of 6 to 8 inches before cold weather shuts off the sap flow.

In the past the growing of alfalfa in rows in dry regions has been recommended, but experimental evidence gathered by the department in the last few years shows that, with the exception of a few rare varieties the seed of which sells for a high price, this method is seldom practical. Where the rainfall is not sufficient to grow alfalfa in broadcast stands it cannot usually be grown profitably in rows. A slightly larger yield may be produced, but not enough to pay for the added expense. Also the hay harvested on this cultivated ground is apt to be dirty and it is hard to cut and load.

Accumulating experience also has exploded some old notions about the value of cultivation of broadcast alfalfa. It has been found that harrowing a field of alfalfa ordinarily does not increase the yield; neither does it prolong the life of the stand to any noticeable extent. The modified spring-tooth harrow does not injure the plants, but the disc often kills many and reduces the stand. Some sort of cultivation appears advisable in irrigated regions where the water carries a great deal of silt or where the soil has been compacted by the tramping of cattle pastured on the alfalfa. The department believes there is usually little to be gained by cultivating broadcast fields when the stand is good. If weeds and grass work in and reduce the stand it is better to plow up the field and put in another crop for a year or two. It is hard to thicken a thin stand by cultivating it and sowing more seed; in fact, it is a waste of time, the department believes.

MANY LEGENDS OF THE OAK

Tree's Grandeur and Beauty Seem to Have Impressed Each Ancient Race in Turn.

The ancient races, struck with the noble aspect of the oak, have in all ages enveloped it in the clouds of their legends and carried it back to the remotest antiquity. Of this class was the holm oak, which in the days of Pliny still existed near Rome, on the trunk of which was an Etruscan inscription in letters of brass stating that before the existence of the Eternal city it was already the object of popular veneration. The Roman naturalist also asserts that in the environs of Heracles, in the kingdom of Pontus, there was a tradition that two oaks which overshadowed the altar of Jupiter Stragius had been planted by Heracles. The origin of certain trees is lost in even remote antiquity.

The imposing terror of the Hercynian forest has deeply impressed all those who have described Germany, and Pliny and Tacitus especially. The aged oaks of its somber vales, where wandered the elk and the aurochs, especially aroused the admiration of the Roman historian. "The majestic grandeur of the oak in this forest," he says, "surpasses all imaginable belief; this tree has never been touched with the ax; it is contemporary with the creation of the world and appears to be the symbol of immortality."

RED COW UNDER SUSPICION

Silly English Superstition That Her Milk Would Make the Hair of Baby Red.

A director of a London dairy company told a correspondent recently at a dairy show a circumstance illustrating a belief that existed not long ago in connection with a cow's milk.

It was in the days when many London dairies kept a few cows at the back of the establishment, partly to give the impression that the daily milk supply was all derived from these cows, or to enable the proprietor to meet the wants of his customers in special cases for infant feeding. The shop had been closed for the day, when a woman called to ask for new milk for a baby. This was supplied.

Shortly after the woman called again and asked: "Can you tell me the color of the cow you took that milk from?"

The owner of the establishment said he was not quite sure, but would go and see. He went and returned saying: "It was a black cow, but why do you want to know?"

"Well, sir," she replied, "if it had been a red cow my mistress would have asked you to change the milk, as the baby would then have had red hair, and she does not want that."—London Morning Post.

A Yankee Samson.

For a long time Grandfather Higgins insisted that he was a very light sleeper and that a slight noise would always waken him. On the other hand, grandmother was sure that he could sleep sounder than the ordinary person—so sure, indeed, that she declared she could cut off his whiskers some night without his knowing it until morning. Grandfather retorted that if she could succeed in doing it, he would go with her to visit their son in Idaho.

For a few days grandmother said no more about it; apparently both had forgotten the conversation. But one morning when grandfather awoke his throat and the lower part of his face felt unusually cold. He sat up in bed, put his hand to his face, and uttering a little cry, jumped up and hurried to the mirror. Sure enough, his whiskers were gone. He looked round in bewilderment and saw a mass of grayish-white hair and a pair of grandmother's shears on a chair beside the bed. Grandmother was right!—Youth's Companion.

Mardi Gras at New Orleans.

The New Orleans observance of the Mardi Gras has been growing steadily since its establishment in 1830, and is now numbered among the most brilliant of the public and social festivities of the United States. His Majesty Rex, the king of the carnival, first rode at the head of a body of Arabic troops in honor of the Russian Grand Duke Alexis in 1872. The experiment was a success, and Rex became an established favorite. The "Mystic Crews of Comus," however, antedates this portion of the carnival by some 15 years, for it was in 1857 that the first "Mystic Crew" appeared in a fantastic night parade of gorgeous floats, manned by masked revelers. But so many additions have been made to the Mardi Gras that now Rex and Comus are only two features of a magnificent celebration which embraces the entire city.

Good Whistler Story.

"One of Whistler's stories was of Burne-Jones and himself going to a country fair and wandering into a side-show to see a tattooed lady—and he was afraid to say how many subjects were tattooed on her—on one knee the American Eagle, on the other, the Union Jack, and on her back Leonardo's Last Supper. And she really was amazing, and they enjoyed it hugely. Some four or five years afterward, in London, Burne-Jones burst in upon Whistler, and told him the same tattooed lady was at the Aquarium, and they went and see her again. And they went and she had grown very stout in the meanwhile and when they looked at the Last Supper, all the apostles wore a broad grin."—From "The Whistler Journal" by E. R. and J. Pennell.

STORIES TOLD OF WEBSTER

Interesting to Learn That Marvelous Orator Was, After All, Much Like the Ordinary Man.

We hear so much about the leonine appearance and the "godlike eloquence" of Daniel Webster that it is refreshing to read an anecdote that presents the man in a more human and less imposing light.

Once, says a chronicler of life in old Washington, Webster arrived late at a concert that the famous Jenny Lind was giving and entered just as she was to sing Hail Columbia as an encore. When she sang the first note Webster jumped to his feet, and when she reached the chorus he joined his powerful bass voice with hers. In vain Mrs. Webster tried to drag him back into his seat. He supported the singer in every chorus; and each time when the song was ended he made a deep bow to her and waved his hat. Miss Lind curtsied to him in return, and he bowed again. To the delight of the audience they continued the little comedy of etiquette for some time.

One day when Webster was going to make an address his wife brought their little son to hear his father. The orator began in the thunderous tone for which he was famous. "Will any man dare to say—" he demanded and then paused to sweep his breathless audience with a Jovian glance.

But the climax of this awe-inspiring sentence was lost in a gale of laughter, for a wee voice promptly piped from the gallery: "Oh, no, papa, no, no!"—Youth's Companion.

TAKES HIGH RANK AS CRITIC

Friend Paid Tribute to James Huneker's Virtues as a Writer—Fearless and Stimulating.

If one were to choose one word that was to sum up all of Huneker's virtues, one would say that he was refreshing, writes Norman T. Byrne in Scribner's. He was an inestimable breath of fresh air that deranged the musty rooms of a criticism grown didactic and lifeless. Life and vigor were typified by his style—a sheen of sparkling phrases set in a rhythmical prose that borrowed much from his musical training.

He was well versed in the seven arts, and if his knowledge of some of them was not always profound, his love of them was sincere, and the manner in which he criticized each one in terms of the other is a continued delight to his reader. His taste, entirely European in character, was rarely at fault. He was taken in by some things that were ephemeral, yet he rarely failed to notice each rising star of genius. His defense was fearless and his article always stimulating. Never didactic, never pedantic, if he was found wanting in philosophical ballast he did possess that sense of esthetic value that the scholar too often lacks and that the critic must have. That was Huneker's forte—his taste and his nerve.

Trees' Slow Development.

The slow development of the trunks of certain trees at once calls up images of immobility and eternity. The dragon's blood tree of the Canaries awakens such thoughts. Thrice famous for its strange looks, its vast size and its antiquity, this dragon's blood tree is equally so for the stationary condition of its growth. In the legend of Tenerife we are told that this singular tree was worshiped by the Guanches, its original inhabitants; and it is related that in the Fifteenth century mass was celebrated in the interior of its trunk, a fact even lately attested by the vestiges which were seen of a little altar.

This tree grows so slowly that after a tolerably long interval of time it was not possible to verify any change in its circumference.

Indian's Mystery Carving.

A wonderful bit of wood carving in the museum of the Minnesota Historical society was done by a deaf and dumb Chippewa Indian at White Earth reservation.

Inside a small whisky bottle are the figures of a boy and a dog standing beside a large wheel. Every bit of the construction is of wood, which is brightly colored. How the Indian got all his figures through the narrow neck of the bottle, and how he got his grouping arranged and stuck together is a mystery. Even the neck of the bottle is corked with a big wooden plug on the inside as well as on the outside.

Nobody knows how the Indian got the wood inside the bottle, and the Indian, being dumb, never told.

"Original Package."

In American constitutional law this means the package in which goods are shipped from one state to another. The United States courts held that where an article is imported into one state from another, it does not lose the protection of the interstate commerce clause, while the original package remains unbroken and is the property of the importer. Interpretation of these decisions made it possible to evade state laws by selling direct to the customers in "original packages." The importance of this is in its bearing on the sale of cigarettes and other commodities about which state laws differ.

HOW SOUND IS TRANSMITTED

Vibration of the Air Brings It to the Ear—Travels Faster in Summer Than in Winter.

Sound is transmitted to the ear by the vibration of the air. When one particle of air is made to vibrate it sets the adjacent particles to vibrating, and so a sound wave, if not obstructed, passes in all directions from the sounding body. The calculated velocity of sound in the air when the temperature is at freezing point is 915.69 feet per second. When the temperature increases, sound travels faster, and the rate has been calculated at a little more than one foot per second for each degree of rise in Fahrenheit's thermometer. Contrary to popular belief, sound travels faster in summer than in winter, and in warm than in cold climates. It might be thought that sound would travel more slowly through a dense atmosphere, but the elasticity increases as rapidly as the density, and, therefore, the velocity of sound is not affected by varying density. The velocity of sound in water, when at the greatest density, is 4,707.4 feet per second. The experiments by which this velocity was determined were made by M. Colladon, in 1826, across the Lake of Geneva, from Rolle to Thonon, a distance of about nine miles. Water, therefore, transmits sound four times as fast as air does.

NO OLD AGE PROBLEM HERE

Indians of the Andes Mountains Kill Those of Race Who Reach Fateful Limit.

High in the fastnesses of the Andes mountains of Peru there lives a race which sets an age limit and kills all of its people who reach the fateful mark. In each village an official is appointed to terminate the careers of persons who live too long.

Different communities, however, have different ideas as to what limit should be placed on human existence. In some places the only duty of the executioner appears to be to secure the presence of a man at his own funeral in the "title role." If a person becomes so ill that his funeral becomes a certainty in the near future, a date is fixed for the same, and if the leading figure shows a disposition to be unpunctual, the village executioner takes the matter in hand.

The Andes natives are of Indian descent, possibly from the Quichau Indians, according to scientists. They live in adobe hovels and are said never to remove their clothing. They are very shy and have no diversions aside from chewing coca leaves, from which modern scientists extract cocaine.

Put an Idea Across.

Whether it was mental telepathy or a mere coincidence, I cannot say, but this is what happened:

On a railway station platform at some distance from me stood an immigrant family. The father carried no bundles, but the mother was loaded like a pack mule. In one hand she held a bundle resembling a large week's wash tied up in a sheet. The other arm bore a weighty looking basket and a husky baby.

For about 20 minutes I looked on as that woman in sort of dumb patience stood there motionless under that awful load. It was positively nerve-racking to watch her, and finally I yelled to her, mentally: "For heaven's sake drop those bundles!"

Instantly the woman let go of the bundle, handed the baby to her husband, placed the basket on top of the big bundle, folded her hands over her stomach and heaved a sigh of relief.—Kansas City Star.

Go Back to Fifteenth Century.

If anything should astonish us about trees it is their longevity. The life of animals is ephemeral compared to that of our trees. The pine and great chestnut can assuredly extend their existence to a term of 400 or 500 years. In the Island of Tenerife are found many venerable pines and enormous chestnut trees which in all probability were planted there by the conquistadores at the commencement of the Fifteenth century, the epoch of the invasion of the island.

The former are distinguished from the others, owing to the conquerors having in their pith decorated them nearly all with little madonnas, which are still seen suspended to their boughs.

Man's Marvelous Memory.

A man who has developed his memory until he has an amazing store of information on a wide variety of subjects has been discovered at Birchencliffe, Huddersfield.

Another of his specialties is cricket scores and results. He can tell you the birthdays of national and local celebrities. Once he hears a date he never forgets it, and he has more than once set parents right as to the birthdays of their children.—London Tit-Bits.

SAFEGUARDING THE CHILD

In this day of vicious influences it is imperative that parents seek out every agency which tends to safeguard and develop their children's moral and spiritual nature.

The influences of the street, the "gang" and the movies must be counteracted, and the home and the Sunday School must work together toward this end.

PORTABLE SCHOOLS TEACH

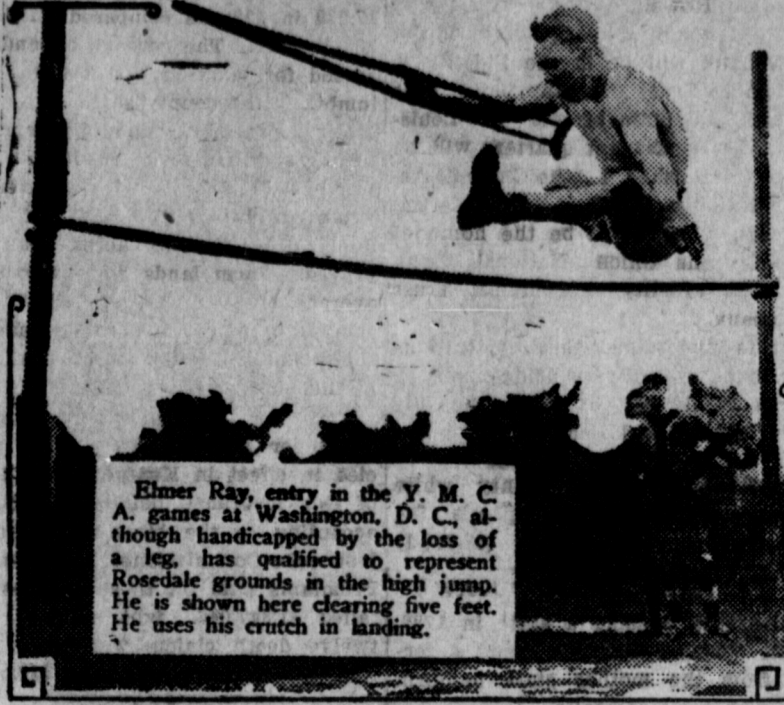

BETTER FARMING METHODS

Portable sheep and poultry schools built on trucks given by local people and conducted by extension workers employed co-operatively by the United States Department of Agriculture and the state college of agriculture went to the doors of homes and the schools and to fairs in North Carolina and Texas last year. An itinerary was mapped out for each school and advertisements were sent ahead announcing the date and hour of its arrival at each place.

Large enthusiastic crowds greeted the school at each stop, and the interest of school children was especially noticeable. This type of school is not only bringing results, but is demonstrating the need of more of such work so that information may be carried directly to the farmers no matter how inaccessible the community may be, say officials of the department.

A story is making the rounds regarding a joke played on a certain local taxi driver that is pretty good.

It appears that his car occupied its usual stand at the depot a few night ago, and the driver in the meantime was landing two fares to carry to town. Time came to leave and the engine was started, but the car refused to go forward.

All other cars had left and the driver worked hard to get a start. Finally it was discovered the car was hitched to a post with a lot of baling wire.

HELD SECRET OF HAPPINESS

John Wesley's Nearly Ninety Years Passed With Remarkably Few Periods of Depression.

There was John Wesley. His "Journal," with its record of indefatigable labor, is one of the cheeriest books in the language. What a rare good time he had! When he was eighty-seven he could say, "I do not remember to have felt lowness of spirits for a quarter of an hour since I was born." For more than sixty years this indefatigable pleasure-seeker had been doing as he pleased. Up every day in time to preach at five o'clock in the morning; then over the hills or through the pleasant lanes to preach again at the time lazy citizens were ready for breakfast; off again, on horseback, or by chaise or in a lumbering stage coach, for more preaching. . . . Now and then facing a mob, or being wet through in a thunder storm, or stopping to get information in regard to some old ruin. Between sermons he refreshed his mind with all sorts and conditions of books. On the pleasant road to Chatham he reads Tasso's "Jerusalem Delivered." On the road to Aberdeen he loses himself delightedly in the misty sublimities of Ossian. "Orlando Furioso" is good Saturday reading. The eager octogenarian confesses that "Aster's shield and horn and voyage to the moon, the lance that unhorses everyone, the all-penetrating sword, and I know not how many impenetrable helmets and shields" are rather too much for his sober English imagination. Still, they afford an agreeable interlude in his missionary journeys. — Samuel McChord Crothers, in "Among Friends."

YOUTH NOT GOLDEN SEASON

Modern Writer Takes Issue With Others Who Have Dubbed It the Best Period of Life.

Following is from "The Way of All Flesh," by Samuel Butler—not the Seventeenth century poet, but the Nineteenth century novelist:

"To me it seems that youth is like spring, an overpraised season—delightful if it happen to be a favored one, but in practice very rarely favored and more remarkable, as a general rule, for biting east winds than genial breezes. Autumn is the mellow season, and what we lose in flowers we more than gain in fruits. Pontelle, at the age of ninety, being asked what was the happiest time of his life, said he did not know that he had ever been much happier than he then was, but that perhaps his best years had been those when he was between fifty-five and seventy-five, and Dr. Johnson placed the pleasures of old age far higher than those of youth. True, in old age we live under the shadow of death, which, like a sword of Damocles, may descend at any moment, but we have so long found life to be an affair of being rather frightened than hurt, that we have become like the people who live under Vesuvius, and chance it without much misgiving."

Fireworks in History.

The business of making fireworks and the business of setting off elaborate displays are sometimes called "the art of pyrotechny," the word "pyrotechny" being compounded of two Greek words meaning "fire art." There is an extensive literature on the subject.

References may be found in the writings of Manilius and Vesputius to the fact that fireworks were set off in connection with the circus in ancient Rome, and Claudianus, who wrote in the Fourth century, mentions "whirling wheels and fountains of fire" in connection with the celebration of certain festivals. Fireworks, and which should not be confounded with mere bonfires, were set off as spectacles and ceremonies during the reign of Henry VII, Henry VIII, Elizabeth and other English monarchs. In those early English days dragons spouting fire were a popular form of fireworks. In a book written on the subject in 1648 there is a reference to "trees and fountains of fire sent high up into the air."

Barley Basis of Weight.

During the reign of Henry VIII standards of length and weight were established with actual grains of wheat and barley as a basis. Three barley corns were an inch, and from that was built up our table of inches, feet, ell (yards), perch and acre. One restriction was that the barley corn must be dry and taken from the middle of the ear and laid end to end. Under this same system 30 grains of wheat made a pennyweight, and from that as a basis they worked out the Troy pound in which 12 ounces still make a pound. Originally the sizes of shoes were based upon grains of barley, and it is said that these are the same today as in the early days. There were 13 grains of barley to each size. "Furlong" is an old English word meaning "furrow long" and is based upon the length a furrow would be in a square ten-acre field.

Protein Foods.

When we eat protein we consume in reality 18 or 20 substances, known as amino acids, each one of which may have quite special functions in nutrition. Some proteins are deficient in certain of these acids which are lacking in the proteins of corn and grain, and for that reason peanuts are an excellent supplement to a cereal diet, whether in the form of a meal or press cake fed with corn and cereal feeds to animals or as a supplement to wheat protein when used with wheat flour in bread making.

SEASONAL GARDEN TIPS

Early blight, which is highly destructive to early potatoes, may be controlled by spraying the plants with Bordeaux mixture when they are from six to eight inches high.

About May 1 is the time to sow the wrinkled-seeded variety of peas. Planting them about two and one-half or three inches deep is said to prolong the bearing period.

In placing cabbage, tomato, egg plant or any other plants that are set in the garden, it is best to keep the ground level, according to gardeners at the College of Agriculture. This brings the roots of the plants nearer the water table and prevents excessive evaporation of moisture.

The Colorado potato beetle can be controlled by dusting the plants with paris green as soon as they come up. The dusting should be repeated as often as necessary.

This is the season of the year when it is necessary to keep the ground in good cultivation to prevent baking which often keeps many young plants from breaking through the soil. Much baking or crusting usually follows heavy rains.

In planting the large growing varieties of peas, it is a good idea to plant two rows about eight to ten inches apart and then place the netting or sticks between the two. Economy in staking is thus made possible by making one row of netting serve two rows of peas.

WHY LYING WASTES TIME

"One of the best ways of saving time is to tell the truth," says Mr. Harris. "It is amazing to me how people of all kinds waste time by lying, or bluffing, or side-stepping, or trying to let somebody down easy. For instance, someone comes into your office to ask for a job. You haven't anything for him and you know you won't have. But you hate to come out flatly and tell him so; you say, 'I'm sorry I haven't anything just now; you might leave your name with me, and if anything turns up—'

"You sidestep the unpleasant task of telling the truth, and what happens? A few weeks later your caller comes back to see if anything has turned up, and you have the whole thing to do over again. That is just one example of how we waste time by not stating the truth and getting it over with. You give a sigh of relief when you get rid of something, or someone, in this manner. 'There!'

Another Big Sale Of Tobacco Made

Announcement that the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association had sold another "good" big order to the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company was made at Lexington on Friday night by President James C. Stone. The announcement followed a busy day for President Stone, J. N. Kehoe, of Maysville; Bush W. Allen, of Harrodsburg, and John B. Winn, of Versailles, members of the executive committee, and a number of conferences between President Stone and representatives of a number of manufacturers, including the R. J. Reynolds Company.

While a number of sales have been made since it was announced that the redried tobacco was ready for the market, the sale Friday was the first in which the identity of the purchaser has been made known.

The purchase by the Reynolds company is the third large purchase of leaf tobacco made by this company through the burley association. No information was available as to the actual amount sold or the prices to be paid. The sale was negotiated by Vice President T. H. Kirk, one of the leading men in the Reynolds organization.

Preparations continued in the office of Secretary H. Lee Earley and his assistants for the payment of the second distribution of money to the growers as soon as the details can be arranged.

There will be no lack of demand for the redried tobacco was indicated by the receipt of additional inquiries for this tobacco and for price schedules by President Stone, in charge of sales, and by personal calls of representatives of the manufacturers on the head of the burley association.

Collins Gentry, of Mercer county, and H. B. Carpenter, of Anderson county, left Monday for Huntington, W. Va., to aid Clifford Rhodes, Mercer county farmer, who has been placed in charge of the campaign to sign up the growers of West Virginia and Lawrence and Gallia counties, Ohio. Mr. Rhodes is actively at work in the two states and has been favorably received by the growers, he reports in a letter to field service division headquarters.

In response to an inquiry of Secretary M. Wilson, of the Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association of Virginia and the Carolinas, Assistant Chief of the Field Service Division William Collins has sent Mr. Wilson statements of tobacco growers in ten burley counties, declaring themselves satisfied with the new method of marketing and with the result of this year's handling of the crop by the association. Growers from a number of counties are writing in for contracts, so that they may join the association.

Albert Day, Walton, Boone county, reported 40 new contracts by growers in a single day.

The senior class of the County High School will present its annual play at the Tabb Theatre Tuesday evening, May 16.
